

Supporting your Terrific Twos

Being two is exciting, scary, interesting, confusing, satisfying and frustrating all at the same time.

Two year olds are exploring and establishing their sense of themselves as individuals.

“When adults are sensitive to two year olds needs outcomes are positive. Two year olds only benefit when what is provided meets the needs of their stage of development.” Penny Tissoni

During this session practitioners will explore the importance of attachment and the role of the key person, the value of heuristic play within an enabling environment and what it is like to be two.

This course will enable practitioners to:

- Revisit and evaluate their role as a key person
- Understand how heuristic play supports children to make sense of their world